J.C. Penney Co. to honor city's top volunteers

The J.C. Penney Co. is attempting to find leaders who are living by the golden rule.

The Golden Rule Award, in its fifth year, is awarded to individuals and groups that are committed to volunteerism. Nominations for the award are open to the public. The deadline for submitting the names of nominees is October 18.

Samuel Gresham, Columbus Urban League President, is the chairman of a group of five panels lists who will screen the nominees and recommend the local winners. Other panel members include John W. Galbreath, the honorary chairman; Rabbi Gary Huber; Patricia Schmucki, owner of Downtown Aliyeh; and Jimmy Crum, sportscaster at WCMH-TV.

Winners will be honored at an awards dinner Nov. 16. A monetary award and commissioned sculpture will be given to each winner.

NAACP wants KKK display out of historical center

The Columbus branch of the NAACP is spearheading a concerned citizen's campaign in an effort to have the Ohio Historical Center's administration remove a display of the Ku Klux Klan exhibits at the center.

Cornell McCleary, first vice president of the association, angrily asked, "What is the difference between the way this display is and the posting of a burning cross and a Confederate flag on the Statehouse lawn?"

McCleary viewed the display Oct. 9 after being told about it by an anonymous caller to the association. "We want the center to explain what the display stands for. It is definitely not educational," he said.

Melinda L. Knapp, spokesperson for the Historical Center, told The Call & Post that the display was prepared for the center's annual board meeting, held Sept. 26, and that the exhibits are not intended to be there permanently.

Knapp would not comment on why the information near the display did not explain what KKK stands for, when reminded by McCleary about the horror, terror and destruction caused by the KKK to Blacks, Jews, Catholics and other minorities.

Knapp said the display is educational in that "it is a part of Ohio's social history that is not known."

McCleary said, "The center's claim that the display is educational is frivolous. 'The exhibits are no different than going into any public building and finding KKK symbols etched or painted on the walls, and the Governor or Mayor applauding the actions of the perpetrators," he said.

Knapp said the center does not have the intention of expanding the display. She said it is a part of the Notable Museum Acquisition for 1986-87, donated to the center by anonymous people.

"All of the exhibits displayed feature items we either purchased or were given to us," she said. "We do not intend to feature a display about the KKK."

Meanwhile, McCleary said, the NAACP is working with WKIO radio in an effort to begin a call-in on the KKK items display and let the Black community people air their views.

"We want members of the Black community to call the Ohio Historical Center and let them know about the sensitive nature of such a display," McCleary said.

Grassroots support building for convention center levy

By GILBERT PRICE
In 1986, backers of $180 "New World Center" spent over $600,000 in a vain attempt to buy voter support. Now, eighteen months later, the backers have come back with a slimmed-down, $149 million version of the old approach, and a new, grass-roots strategy for gaining community support for the .25 percent sales tax increase which will fund it.

Although the plan is facing an uphill struggle, as a poll has shown that voters are not supporting the proposal, the supporters again believe that this new approach will be successful in getting voter approval for the megamillion dollar project.

Already the plan has lined up strong support in the Black community. The Columbus Urban League has taken a strong position to endorse the tax, known on the ballot as Issue 4. The Citizens for the Convention Center and Civic Arena, the group pushing the approval, has also been able to enlist the support of a number of Black community leaders to push for the proposal.

"Our ranks are growing with people from all over Franklin County," said Sherry Buk, one of eight co-chairpersons for the group.

Among many in the Black community, support for the new convention center has been contingent upon some plan of aggressive assurance of minority participation in the project.

The Urban League's statement, for example, specifically mentions the goal of ensuring maximum feasible participation for Blacks in all phases of the construction, operation and management of the convention center, including assurances that there will be greater involvement of Blacks in the hospitality industry.

A group of Black business, community and political leaders has been working on a plan, which would entail some set-asides in both the architectural phase and the construction phase of the project; goals for the hiring of minorities on the construction trades on the project; set-asides in the concessions once the center is completed; and jobs in the management of the convention center authority, including new jobs in the management of any hotels tied to the center.

Luther Yates named head of Black affairs office

COLUMBUS--Governor Richard F. Celeste today announced the appointment of Luther C. Yates, Jr., a veteran public administrator, as his "ambassador to the Black citizens of Ohio." Yates was named to head the Governor's Office of Black Affairs.

"Yates brings to this position a wealth of experience in state government and the private sector," said Governor Celeste. "His knowledge of state government combined with his familiarity of the needs and concerns of the Black community will assist my administration in improving the quality of life for Black residents of Ohio."

"I will be working in behalf of the Governor in areas such as housing, underemployment, education, minority business development, and affirmative action to determine what's working and what needs to be done and can be done by state government," Yates said.

Yates will provide input to state agencies about the programmatic concerns Black organizations and constituencies face in dealing with state bureaucracy. He will also prepare policy papers and review proposed legislation for its effect on Black people.

"I will be working to bring state government closer to the various segments of the Black community in Ohio and Blacks closer to state government," said Yates.

Yates most recently was the Deputy Director of the Ohio Department of Commerce's Division of Unclaimed Funds. He earlier was the Chief of the Commerce department's Division of Licensing, which regulates security guards, private investigators, personnel placement services and auctioneers.

Before joining the Commerce department staff, he was the assistant director of the Ohio Housing Development Board, then an independent state agency that made non-interest bearing loans to non-profit housing sponsors for the planning and preparation of housing development for low and moderate income families. The Ohio Housing Development Board is now a part of the Ohio Department of Development.

Yates was employed in the seventies by the Department of Economic and Community Development as a program manager for the Model Cities III-B program. The program was created to establish statewide, economic development corporations to deal with urban renewal programs, regional planning authorities, and areas designated as Model Cities.

In addition to these positions in the public sector, Yates was the managing chemist in quality control for one of the largest pharma-

Att'y group urges retention of Jackson, Pearson on court

The Franklin County Trial Lawyers Association has endorsed four incumbent lawyers in the race for the Franklin County Municipal Court, including one who is the first Black female to serve on the court.

Judge Janet Jackson, who was appointed to the court last year, received the approval of the group, which is comprised of lawyers who specialize in courtroom advocacy. Also endorsed was Judge James A. Pearson, who is unopposed.

Other endorsements were Judge Richard Sheward, who is also unopposed, and Judge Thomas V. Martin. Martin had previously served as a Common Pleas Court Judge.

Jackson came to the court after a stint as chief of the Workers' Compensation section of the Attorney General's office.

Columbus city council candidate Ray Jones is calling on the city to adopt a comprehensive plan for the city of Columbus.

"City leaders have been ringing their hands for more than a year over the head for a comprehensive plan in Columbus. It's time we get about the business of planning," Jones said in a news conference in Battelle Park.

Jones is calling on Ohio State University President Edward Jennings and Columbus Mayor Dana Rinehart to work together to develop the plan. He is also urging that the plan incorporate broad community participation, and be focused on issues such as the infrastructure, recreational needs, transportation needs, and the funding mechanisms to meet those needs.

Columbus needs leadership in this area. I have a long background of planning in my business experiences, and I intend to use that experience to move Columbus to its rightful position as America's city," Jones said.

mission will host a candidate's night on Saturday, Oct. 17 at 3:30 p.m. at the Driving Park Plaza, on the corner of Lilley and Livingston Aves. Candidates for a number of local positions, including the school board and the judicial posts, will be on hand.

A poll sponsored by the Columbus Dispatch showed all four Columbus city council incumbents comfortably ahead of their challengers, with lone Republican member Arlene Shoemaker leading the pack. Shoemaker was the choice of 19 percent of the voters. Democrats Charles Mentel, Jerry Hammond and John Maloney all followed.

Among the non-incumbents, Ray Jones was the leader, with 8 percent of the vote.

The Dispatch poll also showed Issue 4, the .25 percent sales tax to fund the $149 million convention center, trailing.

FUELING ENDORSEMENTS?

Rating coalitions split on best board candidates

By GILBERT PRICE
Call and Post Staff Writer

broadbased, bipartisan coalition has endorsed a team for the Columbus board of education which would, if elected, retain the current racial flavor of the board empaneling three incumbents and two challengers.

However, the group's endorsements differed slightly from those of the 29th District Citizens' Caucus, a group chaired by State Rep. Larry Miller, which also endorsed a slate of candidates for the five seats.

Endorsed by the coalition, which included both political parties, the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce, and the Columbus Education Association, were incumbents Pauline Radebaugh, Robert Weiler and Richard Fahey, and newcomers Anne Hall and Sharlene Morgan. Morgan, assistant executive director of the Black Elected Democrats of Ohio, was the only Black candidate nominated.

Left off the endorsed ticket was current board member Richard Darwin, who blasted the endorsement process as "deal-making."

"I think this is against the whole electoral process, and I'm going to make it a campaign issue," Darwin was quoted as saying.

The bipartisan coalition and the 29th District Caucus agreed on the candidacies of Weiler, Radebaugh and Fahey. However, the Caucus also endorsed Ohio Bell executive D.E. "Duke" Hobson and attorney Donald Conley.

It was considered a foregone conclusion that the coalition would endorse Hall, who has strong ties to the downtown and political communities. She currently works for Bank One, has been a fundraiser on behalf of Gov. Celeste, and has city council member Ben Espy as her campaign chairman.

However, the endorsement of Morgan was somewhat of a surprise to some observers. Some had expected the endorsement to go to either Hobson, who had previously been a finalist for appointment to the board, or Donald Conley, whose wife was a teacher in the Columbus Public Schools and who had previously been on the ballot before in a losing election for judge.

In announcing the endorsements, CEA President John Grossman said only that the five candidates selected "are people who will work to move the Columbus district forward." Other coalition members refused to comment on the endorsements or the process.

The group, the Coalition for an Effective School Board, will not provide money to candidates. However, it is possible that the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce and the CEA's political education committee would contribute to endorsed candidates.

TEEN DREAM

Columbus recording artists come home to help WCKX celebrate their anniversary.

'Teen Dream' to perform at WCKX anniversary tribute

Columbus teenage superstars Lisa Jackson, Terry Whitlow, and Desiree, better known as "Teen Dream", will perform at the WCKX Third Anniversary Community Awards Presentation on Thursday, October 15, 1987 at the Martin Luther King Center.

Keynote speaker for the event will be Mayor Richard G. Hatcher of Gary, Indiana. Hatcher, a lifelong civil and human rights activist, has been Gary's Mayor for over 20 years. He is president of the National Civil Rights Museum and Hall of Fame, chairman of the board of Trans Africa, member of the National Democratic Committee, member of the executive committee of the National Urban Coalition, and Gary Democratic Party chairman.

Teen Dream is the creation of Columbus musician and promoter, Chris Powell. He brought the girls together and got them an audition with Warner Brothers' talent scout, Benny Medina who signed them for a major recording contract.

The WCKX event will begin at the King center at 7 P.M. tonight and will include a reception, a buffet dinner and program, and the live entertainment. Jack Harris, president and general manager of the 3-year-old station said, "We've got a lot of thanking to do in this community for the support given us since day one. The anniversary is just one way we're saying thanks to the community. We were lucky to get both Mayor Hatcher and Teen Dream for the event." Harris, a Chicago native, bought the station in 1984 and it began airing contemporary urban soul in October of that year.

NAACP Executive Board opposes convention center, AmeriFlora

By NICK SPENDER
Call and Post Staff Writer

Citing a greater need to address the social needs of Central Ohio, the Columbus Chapter of the NAACP's Executive Committee voted to oppose the convention center, civic arena and AmeriFlora 92 projects.

Melanie Mitchell, president of the NAACP's Columbus Chapter, referenced the need to "house the homeless" and upgrade the city's infrastructure as greater priorities.

Moreover, Executive Committee members cannot support the projects until more information is known about the economic impact on the Black community.

"We have been getting this information piecemeal," Mitchell said. "There are all kinds of development activities in store and the (Black) community would like to know what's being planned for the next four years."

In other words, the NAACP is asking that a master plan be presented to the community at-large that spells out the benefits as well as the economic and social impact of these projects.

"The NAACP needs some firm commitments in dollars and cents," she said.

She hinted that the organization's position could be reversed if the master plan reflects the best interest of the Black community.

The NAACP is holding elected officials accountable for failing to supply their constituents with relevant information about these projects and for failing to link these projects to the social needs of the community.

"Based upon a substantial amount of documentation and other reliable information, the NAACP has established that on several occasions, the social impact issue was raised and suppressed since at least 1984," the president said.

"We are not only calling upon the community to not support these projects, but also to not vote for any candidates now seeking office who do not publicly commit to addressing the social impact issue. Republican or Democrat," Mitchell said.

The proposed 500,000 square foot Convention Center project will cost an estimated $128.1 million. If approved by Franklin County voters on November 3, it will be paid for by raising the sales tax by .25%.

AmeriFlora, which is expected to attract 50,000 visitors to Columbus per day, will affect the Franklin and Wolfe Park areas.

Cancel Arizona meeting

The Radio-Television News Directors Association has canceled plans to hold its national convention next year in Arizona in protest of Gov. Evan Mecham's cancellation of a paid state holiday honoring the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Associated Press reported last week.

The cancellation is the 33rd this year over the Mecham-King controversy at a cost of $14 million in lost business, according to city officials in Phoenix, Ariz.

The association voted Sept. 12 at its annual meeting in Orlando, Fla. to scrap plans to bring 2,800 members to Phoenix in 1988. The convention had been expected to bring at least $1.7 million in business to Arizona.

"I think some of our board members were concerned that in view of the governor's vetoing a Martin Luther King holiday that this was not a state that would be perceived by minorities as supportive of equal rights," said Ernie Schilz, president of the association, based in Washington.

Schulz said the move was sparked in part by a report he presented at the association's annual meeting that showed Black hiring in radio and television newsrooms across the nation had started to decline. He added that the decision also hinged on Mecham's frequent run-ins with the media.

The group's resolution against going to Arizona states that the association "deplores the inhospitable atmosphere in the state of Arizona inimical to equal and First Amendment rights."

Schulz said a new site for the meeting has not been determined yet.

No on State Issue 1

Ohio schools were supposed to be the big winners when proponents of the Ohio Lottery successfully fought for the repeal of a constitutional prohibition against lotteries — but they weren't.

Now, 13 years later, voters are again being asked to ratify that deception by constitutionally earmarking all Lottery profits for primary and secondary education expenditures.

Since enactment of the lottery enabling legislation, voters have increasingly believed that mounting lottery profits were relieving them of a significant responsibility to tax themselves for support of local schools.

In reality, many voters voted for a lottery because they like to gamble. Their affirmative votes were cast in an atmosphere of hypocrisy created by legislators searching for an excuse to validate their vote, yielding to the base desire of the gambling public.

There is nothing wrong with gambling for gambling's sake, if it's not done in excess. There is no need to confuse the public's obligation to support education with the desire to gamble.

The Ohio Lottery has enough rules. It has too many, and doesn't need any more. Current rules prohibit the lottery from joining the new multi-state lottery whose record prizes are sure to attract millions of dollars from Ohio State Lottery. Similarly, proposals for a lottery to finance public sports facilities are prohibited by current law. Issue One permanently restricts lottery profits to education and should be opposed.

The Ohio Lottery should be a flexible financing instrument for public projects that go beyond the normal scope of government.

Issue One dilutes support for local school issues and provides a ready excuse to shirk responsibility for supporting local tax issues for public schools.

Vote against hypocrisy and Vote No on State Issue 1.

For State Issue 2

The infrastructure — the bridges, highways, sewer and water systems that Ohioans take for granted are beginning to thrust themselves on the public in very demanding ways. Bridges are falling down and others are closed. Sewers are backing up and drinking water is often rust filled and foul smelling. Highways and streets are obstacle courses, where huge chuckholes await unsuspecting motorists.

Years of neglect, deferred maintenance and lack of new construction have brought on a real emergency that local government is incapable of dealing with.

Tax bases are shrinking in urban centers, federal revenue sharing has been eliminated and capital improvement needs are greater than the credit of local government.

Issue 2 is a constitutional amendment which permits the state to finance, or assist local government to finance, improvements to the infrastructure through the issuance of general obligation bonds backed by the full faith and credit of the state of Ohio.

Over a ten-year period, $1.2 billion in bonds would be issued at a maximum amount of $120 million per year. The amendment limits the issuance of bonds that would adversely affect the state's credit rating.

The measure also calls for the use of Ohio products, services and labor to the extent possible. Sooner or later, Ohioans are going to have to pay. Issue 2 is the least expensive way to finance improvements and should be approved.

Defeat of the issue can only mean more bridge closings or worse, more bridges falling down.

For your sake — Vote for Issue 2

Against State Issue 3

The so-called "Merit Plan" of selecting judges is nothing more than a blatant attempt to concentrate the power to select judges in the hands of a few people who answer only to the governor. Voters have no say in the naming of Merit Selection Judicial members or the judges they select.

The plan, developed by the Ohio State Bar Association, requires half the people on the judge selection panel to be lawyers.

Supporters say "merit selection" would reduce campaign costs and reduce the influence of special interests. They also claim it would end the "name game" of selecting judges and provide for judges who are fair, impartial and competent. There is no basis in fact for any of these claims.

The "merit" system would be more arbitrary and biased toward minorities than the current system where Blacks seldom win the endorsements of any association of lawyers that is dominated by white males. Under current law, every citizen is accorded an inalienable right to select those persons who would serve the public.

The so-called Merit Plan is nothing but a reshaped version of the Missouri Plan, defeated by Ohioans fifty years ago. It is a transfer of power from the people to an elitist lawyer-dominated, special interest group that should be defeated.

The Republican and Democratic parties and Organized Labor all oppose Issue 3. There is no place in Ohio for laws that take from the people the rights the United States Constitution grants.

Vote NO on Issue 3.

Stop Bork's confirmation

The confirmation of Judge Robert H. Bork received a staggering, but not necessarily fatal blow, when the Senate Judiciary Committee concluded its deliberations with a resounding 9 to 5 vote against his seating on the U.S. Supreme Court. It is now up to the entire Senate membership to record its vote.

While Bork's shocking record and constitutional philosophy undoubtedly were his undoing he and the President of the United States have vowed to continue the effort. This too we believe will be futile. However, it should not be taken for granted.

There are indications that some Senators who opposed Bork during confirmation hearings will switch their support to him during the debate before the full Senate.

Two Senators have already indicated a willingness to change and conservatives are prepared to make the Bork vote a litmus test for southern conservatives. Both Ohio Senators have indicated their opposition to Bork but we will reiterate our overwhelming opposition to Bork. Concerned Ohioans should also ask friends and relatives in other states to write their senators asking that they also vote against Bork.

As one organization testified "we are one justice away from injustice."

IN YOUR OPINION

Accountability needed for Blacks and education

In a recent issue, the question was asked in the On The Street section: "Other than financial reasons, why do you think more Blacks are not seeking a higher education in the nation's colleges and universities?"

While many of the answers were valid, it is clear that, at most institutions, recruitment, retention and graduation programs consist mainly of lip service. It is foolishness to think the job can be done by one single individual.

The solution lies in holding every department and unit accountable for recruitment, retention and graduation efforts. New entry requirements, already minimal minority staff, increasing tuition, decreasing loan availability and downright racism account for most of the problem.

We must stop building buildings and get back to meeting the basic needs of populations we should be serving.

There is a dangerous precedent occurring on college campuses. Under the auspices of enlightened spirit, we fight students more interested in bowleramas and sock hops than we do critical social issues. If the trend continues, resegregation plans will set up and set us back 50 years.

When we want graduate students in school, we pay them. Perhaps we should pay our undergraduates. As a further suggestion, we already have a bed tax in many cities; perhaps we should have a special tax on all election money spent and have these funds placed in a scholarship fund.

We are depriving ourselves of what we say we truly value — and educated populace.

In faith,

The real issues

It would be very enlightening, to both the public and myself, if the Call and Post would list the various issues that will appear on the ballot in November with a clear explanation of each issue.

The political jargon and the wording of the issues as they appear on the ballot can sometimes be confusing and may result in a voter casting his/her vote other than how it was intended.

As a concerned citizen, I need to understand the true meaning of each of these issues. I believe that I speak for a lot of concerned voters.

I also believe that, with a better understanding of the issues, more voters may turn out at election time.

Issue 3

The Cuyahoga County Bar Association strongly opposes Issue 3 — the so called merit plan. The merit plan is a system of selection by lawyers and governor-appointed non-lawyers, none of whom are accountable to the voting public.

The public will no longer be electing judges. The Cuyahoga County Bar Association is unalterably opposed to the plan simply because the people will lose their right to elect judges to the Courts of Appeal and to the Supreme Court of Ohio.

Americans have fought for the right to vote for 200 years since the US Constitution was established. Before all Americans over eighteen could vote, we had to abolish requirements that one had to be male, white, own property, pay a poll tax, live in an area where your vote counted less than a vote in other geographical areas, and one had to be at least 21 years of age.

Any system that takes away the vote is an encroachment on a precious American right. The proposed plan puts the right to pick judges in the hands of small groups of eight, or 16 lawyers, selected by Courts of Appeal judges and non-lawyers selected by the governor. Not one of these selectors is accountable to the public.

The Cuyahoga County Bar Association strongly prefers that judges be elected by the people, just as they elect our President, Congress, and state and local officials. People should be a part of the judicial process and that includes electing the judges of courts where people sit as jurors.

The proposed Issue 3 steals from Ohioans their precious right to vote for judges that they prefer.

The Cuyahoga County Bar Association urges the defeat of Issue 3, on November 3.

School Board

Ralph Perk Jr., Joseph Gallagher, and Mildred Madison will be seeking your votes in the November 3 election. Now is the time for citizens to go back in time and pry open the doors, long enough to ask these members for some answers.

The Federation of Community Planning, with the input of 34,000 Cleveland citizens, offered the community at large the report "You're the Teacher: An Assessment of Basic Skills in the Cleveland Public Schools." Thousands of citizens found democracy at work when they found their educational concerns incorporated into the report.

On the day the report was handed over to school officials, Jarry Jarrett, chairman of Ameritrust, said, "The federation is asking the board to study the recommendations, develop a plan of action and participate in meetings the federation would like to conduct." The plea was ignored. No meetings took place.

On July 1, 1985, I addressed a lengthy Open Letter centering arguments on the importance of the report. Copies of the letter went to community activists, the superintendent, and all board members.

Ralph Perk Jr. replied 15 days later. He offered no hints of support for the report, but did instruct Al Tutela (then interim superintendent) to address questions I raised in the Open Letter. No response. The silence continued.

Former board members who helped crush the report was Ted Bonda, Joseph Tegreene, and Ed Young. Tolliver was rewarded for his silence. He is now board president. The report was doomed from the start of Mr. Jarrett's request.

But the "You're the Teacher" report was not produced in vain. Although the central message "educational reform" failed to move collective minds of top school officials, it revealed serious flaws in the democratic way the system handles citizen concerns.

On November 3, Cleveland voters must "think" before choosing among candidates seeking to fill three seats on the board. Is Perk, Gallagher, and Madison worthy of voter consideration? Certainly. But first, "think."

Don't believe everything you read. Raise some questions. Perk, Gallagher, and Madison should be willing to answer them.

Respectfully,
Leonard P. Hough
Cleveland, OH.

Only voice

I read the Call and Post every week and I find the newspaper very informative. It upsets me a great deal when I hear negative criticism about the paper, especially when criticism comes from other Blacks.

The Call and Post is not a perfect paper, but neither is the Plain Dealer. The New York Times often makes corrections for errors in its articles; but if the Call and Post makes a mistake, the public is quick to label its editors and reporters incompetents.

Who do you run to when you've been a victim of police brutality or racism? Who puts you on the back when you get a job promotion or graduate from college? Who is proud to announce your wedding engagement or the birth of your children? It certainly is not the Plain Dealer, the Sun Press, or Robin Swoboda.

The negative attitude many Blacks display toward the Call and Post only demonstrates the lack of confidence they have in themselves.

I think it's time more Blacks start showing more consideration to the only voice they have.

Sincerely yours,
Mary Jones

Effortless flick

They can cause accidents or near misses. They can slow down the flow of traffic. They irritate other drivers. Who am I referring to? Those persons who fail to use their turn signals.

Automobiles have been in existence for at least a century and for as long as I can remember, they have been equipped with turn signals.

In case you didn't understand, I said they have been equipped with turn signals. So why doesn't anyone use them?

Granted, over a period of time certain things tend to lose their effectiveness, such as the human appendix, but if your car has enough power to run then your turn signals have enough power to blink. A nearly effortless flick of a switch.

But no, these brainless clods just turn and turn, without any advance warning, and actually have the nerve to cop an attitude if someone blows his horn at them. Life is full of rules; some simple and others complex.

If you can't follow this amazingly simple rule, then I take great pleasure in informing you that RTA is alive and well, and operating in Cleveland.

New Black studies boss addresses 250 at lecture

by YOLANDA ROBINSON
Call and Post Contributing Writer

Approximately 250 people attended the first inaugural lecture series sponsored by the Ohio State University Black Studies Community Extension Center and the Community Advisory Board. Dr. Manning Marable, the new chair of the Black Studies Department, spoke on the Challenges Facing Black Studies and Black Education.

Marable told the audience that challenges for Black students higher education are far greater than it was ten years ago. There has been a decline of Black students enrolling in some form of post secondary education. In 1977 90% of all Black students enrolled in some form of post secondary education and 51% white students; in 1980 there were 542% Black students and 58% white. The figures for Blacks are declining. Marable stated the reason for the decline is economics. "Blacks have not recovered from the economic recession in 1975. Unemployment continues to remain high in the Black community. It cost money to attend college," Marable said.

Marable also stated that Black colleges have historically played an important role in liberating the Black community. The same is true with dynamic Black Studies Departments in white institutions of higher education.

A dynamic Black Studies Department has three ingredients. First, they must have a body of work that challenges the distortion of the traditional curriculum

(i.e., the exclusion of Black men and women, and elitism), and the work must correct the fallacies. Second, it describes the documentation of the Black experience. And third, the curriculum prescribes theories, programs and movements aimed toward the elevation of economic, social and political oppression of Black people.

Marable said one of his main reasons for accepting the chair of Black Studies at The Ohio State University, was because he saw the possibility of developing a program that could do applied research which could solve the problems facing the Black community. He indicated that he is extremely impressed with the Columbus community's support of Black Studies. Marable said the

OTHER OPINIONS

Bork and Black voters

If there is any indication of the critical nature of Black voter registration and turnout, it is in the apparent failure of President Reagan's nomination of Appellate Court Judge Robert H. Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In a deeply divided Senate, the nomination has turned on the having the best voter registration program in the nation. Ohio's law permits many persons to be deputized as voter registrars; allows registration at a number of public offices; and even permits registration by mail.

In Mississippi, despite some liberalizations in the past few years, voters must register at different locations for state and local elections, and offices are not open at convenient times.

Ohio's law has been successful, Brown argues, because there is "an atmosphere where lots of people want to do registration." One of his earliest acts as Secretary of State, in 1983, was the "Overground Railroad," a voter registration march with representatives of various civil rights groups.

Despite the charge by opponents of liberalized voter registration laws that they invariably lead to fraud, Brown said this has not been the case in Ohio.

"Ohio's always had a reputation of running a good system without fraud," Brown said.

It is clear to Brown what the impact of expanded voter registration programs will be -- an environment in which elected officials become more sensitive to Blacks.

"Clearly, in the South, what you've already seen is that elected officials in the South pay more attention to Black concerns," Brown said. "It doesn't mean that candidates that are pro-civil rights or Black candidates will win, but Black votes will be up for grabs."

Obviously, that has already begun to happen. All of the Southern senators who have opposed Bork received a minority of white support. It was only due to the overwhelming support of Black voters that they are in office. Thus, when Black voters expressed their overwhelming outrage at the Bork nomination, even the most conservative Southern senators had to listen.

The expanded opportunity to vote has begun to change to South. It has seen the election of the first Black congressman in Mississippi since Reconstruction. It has seen the expansion of Black mayors, judges, and other political officials. One could argue, in fact, that it has been a bloodless revolution.

Of course, in a free society, voting has that effect. It appears that is why the forces of conservatism in the South -- and in other parts of the country -- have sought to restrict the franchise, either through poll taxes or literacy tests or even by making registration unnecessarily difficult. And, it is why Black voters ought to always be vigilant to maintain their right to vote.

CAPITAL COMMENTS

BY GILBERT PRICE
"...when Black voters expressed their overwhelming outrage at the Bork nomination...senators had to listen."

approval of several southern Democrats. What has been fascinating, however, is that, in almost every case, the southern Democratic senators -- who are now deeply dependent on Black votes -- have been rejecting the nomination of Bork, because of charges by civil rights activists that Bork would "turn back the clock" on civil rights issues.

But, despite the progress that has been made, more needs to be done. And, in a court case in Mississippi, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund is attempting to open up that state's voter registration laws, which make it difficult for Blacks to register and vote.

Ohio Secretary of State Sherrod Brown testified in that hearing. He had been requested to testify by the Defense Fund, he said, because of Ohio's reputation as

Scoundrels, hypocrites and quacks

Webster defines a scoundrel as: a low, mean, reprehensible person utterly lacking in principle; a hypocrite as: one who affects virtues, qualities and attitudes he does not have; and a quack as: one who pretends unscrupulously to knowledge or skills he does not have. You decide whether any one of these descriptions, or any combination thereof, might fit some members of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

During the Senate Inquiry, euphemistically called hearings, on Judge Robert Bork's nomination as associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, grilled Bork on his statements about the antitrust laws. Bork argued, as do most economists who specialize in Industrial Organization, that much of the antitrust law is inefficient and counterproductive.

Metzenbaum's questioning focused on retail price maintenance agreements, a practice wherein the manufacturer mandates the retail price. Metzenbaum, calling this price-fixing, grilled Bork on his lack of concern for the "little guy" seeking a bargain.

Some manufacturers use these agreements to prevent retailers from price cutting. The manufacturer's marketing strategy calls for competition through advertisements, free trials, return privileges, warranties and other services to the consumer. By not allowing the retailer, who voluntarily enters the arrangement, to lower the selling price, manufacturers force them to compete by offering better customer service.

Bork explained this fairly well for a lay economist, but Metzenbaum was still dissatisfied, continuing to wail about the little guy. If I had been Bork, which explains why his chances for Senate confirmation are light years greater than mine, I would have informed Sen. Metzenbaum that price-fixing, in its most sinister form, is Washington-blessed.

Metzenbaum supports restrictions on foreign textile imports which may help his little guy in the factory, but what about the little guys who have to buy those shirts and shoes? The truth is: Metzenbaum supports many laws condoning restraints of trade, which the Sherman Antitrust Act of 1980 prohibited as "monopolizing combinations" in restraint of trade, simply by exempting them

MINORITY VIEW

BY WALTER E. WILLIAMS
"Virtually every federal agency is involved price-fixing...and Metzenbaum votes in favor of all of it."

Virtually every federal agency is involved in price-fixing or some other form of monopoly in restraint of trade, and Metzenbaum votes in favor of most of it. The California Navel Orange Administration follows a congressional mandate that forces growers to destroy or sell for cattle feed hundreds of thousands of tons of oranges in order to fix the retail price at a higher level. The Federal Trade Commission wanted to examine this collusion but Congress blocked them. The U.S. Agriculture Department has similar requirements for many other crops and dairy products. How does Metzenbaum's little guy benefit from these price-rigging laws?

The Norris-LaGuardia and Wagner acts exempted unions from antitrust prosecution, and the National Labor Relations Board was set up to enforce union monopolies in restraint of trade. Other agencies which have nice sounding noble purposes but which really support collusions and price-fixing are: the Interstate Commerce Commission, the now-defunct Civil Aeronautics Board which used to fix airline prices, the Federal Communications Commission which rigs communications, and the Department of Labor which fixes labor prices through the Davis-Bacon Act and minimum wages.

Without question the day to day business of congressmen, acting in the interests of powerful lobby groups, is to pass laws that rig the economic game. When they come out, as Metzenbaum did in the Bork hearings, mouthing concern for the little guy, how may we characterize them: hypocrites, scoundrels, or quacks?

By the way, I invite any congressman to sue me for libel on any of the arguments contained herein.

Viewer screen attachment strong

Friendship isn't necessarily a two-way street—at least not when it comes to our relationships with the inhabitants of "television land."

Media research indicates that we become attached to our favorite television personalities through a process that mirrors the way we form friendships with the people around us.

Some studies have even suggested that relationships with TV characters can serve some of the same functions as "real" friendships.

According to Dr. Rebecca B. Rubin, an associate professor of speech communication at Kent State University and director of Kent's Communication Research Center, "The presence of a television screen doesn't change the pattern of relationship formation—even in real life, we experience relationships that are one-sided."

A recent study by Rubin and Michael P. McHugh, an assistant professor of communication at Sagamon State University and doctoral student in speech communication at Kent, examined the formation of these one-way, "parasocial" relationships in a survey of 303 university students.

"Our study showed that friendship-like intimacy with TV characters develops when viewers think that the characters are attractive socially or that they would be nice to work with," she said. "But, surprisingly, physical attraction did not prove to be nearly as important to the establishment of these parasocial relationships."

The study, "Development of Parasocial Interaction Relationships," has been published in the Summer 1987 issue of the Journal of Broadcasting & Electronic Media. The Journal, based on Kent, is an international publication of the Broadcast Education Association and is edited by Dr. Alan M. Rubin, associate professor of journalism and mass communication and of speech communication at the University.

Once a character is considered attractive as a friend and/or workmate, viewers may seek them out on a regular basis, until, for example, Thursday night becomes synonymous with Bill Cosby.

Rubin and McHugh found that once a pattern of parasocial interaction with a TV character has been established, the perceived importance of the relationship increases.

Results of the study suggest that, where university students are concerned, TV comedians are the most valued parasocial friends. Of 89 favorite performers named in the study, Bill Cosby, David Letterman, Alan Alda, Michael J. Fox and Johnny Carson were mentioned most frequently.

But whether it's David Letterman or Tom Brokaw, it seems millions of Americans would be perfectly justified in stating "Some of my best friends are television celebrities."

Loretta Heard: campaign duties add to her busy schedule

Loretta Heard, past president of the Columbus School Board and candidate for Franklin County Municipal Clerk of Courts, estimates she will log over 10,000 miles and shake more than 10,000 hands by the time her campaign ends on November 3rd.

Heard, who has been on the campaign trail since March is no stranger to the hustle and bustle of political life. Heard has twice been elected to the Columbus School Board and knocked on thousands of doors since she came to central Ohio from Akron nearly 20 years ago.

Mornings for Heard are busy with meeting and speaking with community and business leaders as well as close friends and supporters about raising money for her campaign. Although it is a task that Loretta does not particularly enjoy, she understands that it goes with the job.

Since Heard is an elected office holder she has important duties that she must still accomplish as a board member. Meeting with administrators and teachers, touring a central Ohio high school or deciding how the system can save taxpayer dollars are typical items such which fill Heard's afternoons.

Heard's responsibilities as President of the Ohio Community Education Association, or as Chairperson of The Ohio State University Upward Bound Program also keeps her schedule filled.

"I know how Adlai Stevenson, the former Democratic presidential nominee, felt when he wore out two pairs of shoes on the campaign trail in 1956," Heard joked, "I'm on the road from dawn to dark and still won't meet everybody that will vote here in 1987."

Heard also mentioned the added work that running for Clerk of Courts places on her daily routine.

"My past two races were for the City of Columbus only. When you expand that to include all of Franklin County you're nearly doubling the numbers of voters you must try to meet," Heard said.

In between morning and afternoon meetings, Heard will try to meet with her husband Hubert and son Howard to advise her on the campaign and her evening activities. It is often the only opportunity Heard has to be with her family. Meals are often missed or eaten apart.

"Campaigning is a great way to lose weight," Heard joked "You have so many people to speak to you often don't have time to eat a square meal."

Heard said that Sunday church service does allow her time to reflect on the weekly activities and the guidance and strength that the Lord has given her.

"I was raised to praise the Lord everyday and thank him for the strength and guidance to make it through each hectic day. I've never forgotten that and know I have much to be thankful for," Heard said.

Heard indicated that is why she includes the workshop service in her campaign routine.

While it is safe to say that Heard would make sure she has plenty of sleep each night, her husband says sometimes she skimps on her rest.

"Sometimes she'll get up at 2 or 3 in the morning and start typing a speech or making notes on an important meeting," Hubert Heard said. "She does keep an incredible schedule!"

Heard said she hopes all the work pays off for the campaign and she is able to get her message of elected experience to the voters.

"I have managed a budget nearly seven times the size of the Clerk's office. I know I can do the job, I just need the chance," Heard said.

Election day is Tuesday, November 3rd.

SON Howard Heard goes over campaign strategy with his mother Loretta Heard, a candidate for the Franklin County Municipal Clerk of Court.

LORETTA HEARD, a candidate for Franklin County Municipal Clerk of Court drops in to greet her husband who is launching with friend Tom Johnson at a local restaurant.

ROUTE--Loretta Heard checks the county map to plot her campaign route for the day.

CAMPAIGN WORKER Sharon Parks and Loretta Heard take a moment to discuss Heard's busy schedule.

TIME OUT--Franklin County Municipal Clerk of Court candidate Loretta Heard, left, lunches with a friend Nancy Webb.

ON THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL--Loretta Heard, a candidate for Franklin County Municipal Clerk of Court greets a well-wisher along the campaign trail.

300 gather to honor Claude Willis for work with youth

A few weeks ago, I had a bit of chatter in the column about an oceanside vacation enjoyed by M/M Claude A. Willis (Irene). Well, the other night was an evening totally designed for Claude when a group of caring people sponsored an appreciation banquet for him at the St. Stephen's Community Center. Over 300 people attended to share in the tribute. Now, I know that you know this because many of you were there. Also, you read the special pre-banquet piece on Claude by Liz Cook in this newspaper a few weeks ago...BUT, I have a few things I want to share with you about the banquet.

The members of the committee responsible for planning and executing the evening (Henry Gilbert, Irene Barnes, Stan Craig, Barbara Smoak, Dick James, Georgia Elliott, Dave Caldwell, Norma Jean Simpson and Ambrose Towers) knew just what they wanted to do, i.e., let Claude know how much appreciation and love there is from all of those whose lives he has touched.

They set the mood long before the affair by caring so much and leaving no stone unturned in making the evening memorable for him. The remarks, songs, and tributes extended during the program by David Caldwell, Henry Gilbert, Richard James, Councilman John R. Maloney, Hiram Tanner, Amos H. Lynch, Irene Barnes, Charles Byrd, Bob Towers, Ike McCrary and Stanley Craig with invocation by Rev. Clarence Caldwell were stirring!!

Each of those people had been involved with him as either players, scorekeepers, young friends, sponsors, or managers of one of the teams Claude started and coached in the 1940's. Columbusites might remember the basketball teams the Whiz Kid, Pythian Druggs, or W.C. Wines. Lorenzo Clark and his wife, Pat, came cross country (Calif.) to extend thanks for the influence Claude had on his life. James Franklin also of Calif. was present too. Among the several out of town tributers were Joe Tillman, Richard Smart, and Delbert Burks of Detroit who were also on the Whiz Kids Basketball Team, the first one Claude started. It was understandable when hankies were dabbed at eyes because the warmth of the expressions of gratitude extended to Claude were heart rendering. Claude said to me that the whole evening was marvelous and the best thing that has ever happened to him. The committee should feel satisfied and fulfilled for sponsoring such a touching celebration. You know, from Claude's birthplace in Jacksonville, Florida through his East High School days, he has been an advocate for children.

From a student at Chaffin College to teaching high school in South Carolina to his work with the Upward Bound Program at Ohio Dominican, being a master to the young has been at the forefront with Claude. His love of sports gave him one avenue to use to assist youngsters in cultivating discipline and goals. By the way, he also started and coached the Yettes, a basketball team for the fairer gender. The program booklet for the evening contained a profile on him. When you look at it, it becomes apparent why he is a helper to people. For example, his response to "Courage is" was "Sojourner Truth"; to his favorite quotation, "When I was a child I spoke as a child..." and to the question, "I'd like people to remember me as—he replied, "A man". Well, in early October Claude W. Willis with his wife Irene beside him, was honored with an outpouring of appreciation for being a caring man of distinction.

Coalition seeks funds to fight 'OSU racism'

A coalition which is dissatisfied with the pace of change at Ohio State University is attempting to raise $12,000 to fight a suit against the school.

The Coalition Against Racism in Colleges and Universities has charged that the university has made an insufficient effort to increase the numbers of Black faculty and students.

Black students now represent less than 6 percent of the university's more than 50,000 students, down from its peak of 6 percent in the mid-1970s. Only 2.5 percent of the school's faculty is Black.

The coalition has proposed several steps to expand Black enrollment at the school, including a return to open admissions; an elimination of the mathematics requirement to graduate; and an expanded recruitment and scholarship effort, to boost the school's enrollment of Black undergraduates to 5,000, up from its present level of 3,000.

Former OSU dean Mitchell Livingston had estimated that an expanded effort to assist Black students at OSU could cost up to $80 million a year for 10 years, the coalition said in an earlier statement.

New Salem Baptist to sponsor Center Stage drama workshop

New Salem Baptist Church, 487 N. Champion Ave. will sponsor a drama workshop Oct. 24 from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Center Stage Theatre, central Ohio's Black theatre troupe will present the workshop, which will be conducted by CST's Deborah Childs Macklin.

"We believe in the expression of our community, its spirit, and its life," Rev. Troy said. "This is an activity in which everyone can participate. New Salem practices a holistic ministry, and theatre is an integral part of that expression."

Madison McCrae, New Salem's Recreational Ministry Director and Knowledge Plus Assistant Director, said, "Ideally we intend to start a drama club. We want to involve the church with the community, hopefully even reach a point where we actually do productions, with members of the community. This workshop is just a start."

We are delighted to conduct this workshop for New Salem. Their ministry is very aggressive, as is CST's outreach program. Both young and old will enjoy the workshop. Those with acting experience and novices will benefit from the workshop. There will be interpretive role playing.

For further information and reservations, contact New Salem Baptist Church at 252-6000.

'Jealous' husband indicted on murder

Calvin V. McCarroll, 25, charged last week in the Oct. 2 shooting spree that left a 9-year-old girl dead and two others wounded in the South Linden area, was indicted Oct. 13 by the Franklin County grand jury on three counts of attempted murder and one count of murder with death penalty specifications.

Christine Workman was spending the night at 1791 Cleveland Ave. she was shot to death in what a relative said was motivated by a jealous rage.

McCarroll was still being held Tuesday in the County jail on a $1 million surety bond.

Columbus police said Christine's 17-year-old cousin, Francine Workman, also was shot. She was being treated Tuesday for gunshot wounds to the chest in the University Hospital, where her condition has been updated from critical to fair.

McCarroll's wife, Barbara McCarroll, 33, Francine's mother, who was also shot, was treated for an arm wound.

Police arrested Mrs. McCarroll's husband, early Oct. 3 and charged him with aggravated murder in Christine's death.

Witnesses told police that Mrs. McCarroll was shot while fleeing the house.

Mrs. Mary Harden, Christine's guardian told The CALL & POST that the girl was shot as she tried to escape from the scene. "He (Mr. McCarroll) pulled her hair from the back and shot her in the head," said Mrs. Harden. "She was an innocent girl."

Harden said Christine, a third-grader at Indian Spring Elementary School, was an active member of Spirit-Filled Church Of Our Lord Jesus Christ, 489 N. Garfield Ave.

She said Mr. McCarroll had threatened many times to kill all members of the family, even without a provocation.

SICKLE CELL

Playwright draws from personal experience

Delores Williams' fictional account of a young man with sickle cell anemia is based on personal experience.

Williams wrote the staged presentation of "Heartache," a dramatization about sickle cell anemia. The show premieres on Friday, Oct. 16 at 7 p.m. in the Martin Luther King Center for the Cultural and Performing Arts. Admission is $5 in advance and $6 at the door.

"Heartache" is the story of a family whose son is afflicted with sickle cell anemia. Drawing on her personal experience, Williams was inspired by her son's (Billy Hensley) battle against the disease.

Hensley was diagnosed as having sickle cell at the age of 3. Doctors told Williams that he would not likely live beyond 12 years old; however, her son beat the odds and is now 27 years old.

Sickle cell is a blood disorder that interferes with the flow of oxygen rich blood through certain parts of the body. Instead of being saucer shaped, the blood cells resemble crescent moons and are unable to pass through small blood vessels.

Center Stage scores with thought provoking one-acts

By TERESA HAIRSTON
Call and Post Guest Critic

This past weekend, Center Stage Theatre presented the World Premiere of two one act plays: "Alice and Me" and "Requiem", both written by Thom Long.

"Alice and Me" centers around the "off-centered" personality of Alice (pronounced "Allease"). Alice played by Brenda Boynton-Magwood, is portrayed with extreme personality. Magwood's changes of moods and opinions are central to the presentation of this lighthearted, somewhat lengthy script. The supporting cast is somewhat unconvincing—their rapport with the audience will improve with experience.

After long spans of seemingly pointless dialogue, the message is finally uttered...there is a small piece of us that exists in the people and fabric of that home, apartment or tenement building where we were raised. No matter how far we get away from that specific dwelling, whether by mentality or lifestyle.

The second play, "Requiem", is definitely worth the wait. "Requiem" is a dramatic conveyance of the emotions of an elderly couple who after years together are threatened with separation due to the wife's failing health and inevitable death.

Letitia Trent does an admirable job as the sickly wife. However, superlatives are in order to describe the performance of Dean Workman, who plays Sam, the faithful, loving and attentive husband. Workman and Trent together, convincingly portray the aging pair, and thus breathe the life into this script...with daring sensitivity.

Workman is captivating as Sam, the husband who cares for his wife adoringly, patiently and untiringly. His awesome love for his wife is evident, however, his love is outweighed by his rage and disappointment with God. Sam grapples with the question... "Why must we lose those we love?" And as his anger grows, it fills the room, the stage, the theater, and yes, even our very souls. Why?...a question often asked, never answered.

The heart-wrenching ordeal of the endurance of the death of a loved-one is an experience all have or will come to grips with. CST and Mr. Long deal with it in a most touching way.

Wrap up and make your way to 1390 Oak Street to this CST production. This production will be held Fridays and Saturdays during the entire month of October. Thought-provoking and enjoyable...Don't Miss It!

MICHAEL FRANKS AT OHIO THEATRE

The Columbus Association for the Performing Arts (CAPA) presents Michael Franks, with special guest Najee at the Ohio Theatre on Oct. 30, at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the Ohio Theatre Box Office, CTO outlets, and Mershon.

With the long awaited release of "The Camera Never Lies," his first new album in two years, Michael Franks has assured his position as one of the most engaging, inventive and influential artists in contemporary music. "A quantum leap" is how Franks himself describes the musical advances he achieved on "The Camera Never Lies."

Actually, the leap began after "Skin Dive," his last album. "It was on the album that I really took the plunge into electronic," Franks explains. "There's been a real revolution in the studio in terms of what can be achieved with machines and it seemed like the right time to start getting involved."

Najee's debut album, "Najee's Theme," masterfully melds the intricacies of jazz with the colorful melodic flavorings of his own compositions. "Najee Theme" is an exquisite blend of serious, but accessible jazz-oriented music. This concert will be excellent for 23, 24, and 25. They celebrate the opening of their 15th season paying homage to Benny Goodman, the "King of Swing." For further information, call 231-7836.

Buck hoopsters open pre-season drills

By LIZ COOK

(COLUMBUS BUREAU)

The Ohio State Buckeyes men's and women's basketball teams begin their season practice today (Oct. 15) in St. John Arena.

The men's squad, led by head coach Gary Williams, has four starters returning to the team which finished at 20-13, and sixth in the conference race at 9-9 last year.

With the loss of OSU's all-time leading scorer Dennis Hopson, new faces to look for in this year's lineup are: Grady Mateen, a 6-foot-11-inch transfer from Georgetown; Randy Doss, a 6-foot-4-inch sophomore from Chicago, Ill.; and 6-foot-8-inch freshman Perry Carter from Washington, D.C.

The men's first game of the season will be held Nov. 22 against Athletics in Action. Big Ten Conference action begins Jan. 7 at Purdue.

The Ohio State Lady Buckeyes are the defending co-champions of the Big Ten title with Iowa.

Posting a (26-5, 17-1) record, the season ended just shy of a Final Four appearance due to a 102-82 loss to Long Beach State in the NCAA West Regional Finals.

The Buckeyes top play-maker this season will be All-American senior Tracey Hall, who holds the best field goal shooting average for one season in the conference at 63.3 percent.

The Buckeyes season will start Dec. 1 at Northern Illinois. Conference action will open against Indiana Jan. 8.

SALE - Reserved season tickets to the 1987-88 OSU women's basketball games are now on sale at the Athletic Ticket Office in St. John Arena. The 14-game ticket package is $43 for the general public, $36 to the OSU faculty and staff, and $29 for students (includes OSU students and children through high school). The schedule will include 1986 national champions and Final Four participants Texas, and nationally-ranked Rutgers and Iowa. Applications are available at the Ticket Office or can be charged by calling 292-2624, or by calling toll free at 1-800-GO-BUCKS.

CAVS PRE-SEASON TO OPEN - The Cleveland Cavaliers pre-season schedule will open Saturday, (Oct. 17) against the Portland Trail Blazers in Oregon. The regular season will kick-off Nov. 7 in New Jersey as the Cavs take on the Nets and league rookie Dennis Hopson. For ticket information call (216) 659-9100. OLD TIMERS KICK-OFF SEASON - The Columbus Old Timers basketball team will begin its 1987-88 season Saturday, (Oct. 17) at the Woodward Park Recreation Center located at 5147 Karl Road. The double-header will feature the club's Wilmington, Del. squad against Dayton, and Columbus against the Washington, D.C. team.

Following the games will be a cabaret at the Smith Place, 1704-A Zettler Road, Columbus. Tickets available from members are $5 in advance, $7 at the door.

Bruce looks to build character before Ohio State-Purdue matchup

By LIZ COOK
Call and Post Sports Editor
(COLUMBUS BUREAU)

The gray, rainy skies which loomed over Ohio Stadium last Saturday simply added to the gloom felt by the Ohio State Buckeyes in their 31-10 defeat to Indiana.

Despite the fact that OSU had not lost to the Hoosiers in 36 years, even sadder is the reality that one of the OSU's top defensive players, senior cornerback Greg Rogan, is out for the season with a fractured left ankle.

Much regrouping must be done as Ohio State (3-1-1, 1-1) will face the Purdue Boilermakers (1-3-1, 1-1) Saturday, (Oct. 17) in West Lafayette, Ind. The game will be televised at 3:30 p.m. on Channel 10.

Purdue last week punted its way to a 9-3 victory over Illinois and its first conference victory under first-year head coach Fred Akers. He accepted the Purdue coaching job following an 86-31-2 record, which included nine bowl appearances in 10 seasons at Texas.

The matchup represents the 36th meeting between the two teams with OSU winning the last 11 of 13, including a 39-11 victory in Ross-Ade Stadium last year. The Boilermakers last defeated the Buckeyes in 1984, 28-23.

Purdue finished with a 3-8 record last year, and tied eighth in the conference with Wisconsin at 2-6.

With seven starters returning on both offense and defense, Coach Bruce doesn't see Purdue as a better football team, just more experienced.

The Purdue offense is run by senior quarterback Doug Downing. The team currently averages 172 yards passing and 115 yards rushing per game.

Split end Anthony Hardy and tight end Brad Schumacher are the team's top two receivers, who currently average 11.3 and 9.81 yards respectively. Both are among the top six receivers in the conference.

On the ground fullback James Medlock, a 6-foot-2 inch senior, has accumulated 396 yards on 98 carries this year. He will be without the assistance of tailback Darren Myles, however, who suffered a leg injury against Illinois. Myles has scored all of Purdue's four rushing touchdowns this year.

NEAC sets candidates' night Oct. 8

The Near East Area Commission (NEAC) will sponsor a Candidates' Night Thursday, Oct. 8 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Cassidy Elementary School, 2500 Cassidy Ave.

The event is designed to provide an opportunity for candidates running for public office to meet Northeast area residents, and make presentations to them about their campaign.

Fred Strickland, a 6-foot-2-inch, 226-pound senior, is leading the defense with 73 tackles. Safety Marc Foster Purdue recovered eight of 10 Illinois fumbles, three of which recovered by safety Marc Foster.

Bruce said the Buckeyes lost to Indiana simply by being totally dominated both offensively and defensively. Outside the team's performance he is more equally concerned about team motivation.

"Our enthusiasm and our momentum is not good," he said. Bruce vowed that this week was going to be a character builder at Ohio State.

NAACP commends governor's order on affirmative action

The Columbus Branch of the NAACP has commended Gov. Richard F. Celeste on his Aug. 11 Executive Order 87-30, which makes all affirmative action programs in all state departments, agencies, and commissions "subject to review and approval" by the State Equal Employment Opportunity Coordinator.

Applauding Gov. Celeste, Malanie Mitchell, president of the association, said: "The Governor has taken a significant step in addressing discrimination and civil rights issues relating to state activities."

Mitchell said without a doubt Celeste has displayed a determination to "move Ohio to the forefront as a state of equal opportunity; breaking away from tradition by granting a Black male power and authority that has never in Ohio's history been attempted or effected by anyone."

Gov. Celeste recently named Gilbert Price as the coordinator of the State Equal Employment Opportunity in the Ohio Department of Administration Services.

In issuing the Executive Order, Gov. Celeste said: "The State Equal Employment Opportunity Coordinator shall possess the full authority to direct state departments, agencies, commissions, and appointing authorities under my jurisdiction to take any action the coordinator deems appropriate in the area of affirmative action and equal employment opportunity."

Cornell McCleary, first vice president of the NAACP, said: "By granting Gil Price the authority to take any and all actions necessary to insure compliance with state and federal mandates concerning civil rights and Equal Opportunity for all regardless of race, sex, religion for the purpose of eliminating discriminatory practices, the state should experience a significant drop in litigation and administrative cost associated with matters, as well as create a model for economic development for minorities, should Price embrace his new authority with conviction and enthusiasm."
